Common safeguarding issues – Pressure Ulcers

This guidance is designed to help managers and professionals know when to report pressure ulcers in accordance with the Oxfordshire Safeguarding Adults Board's procedures.

Pressure ulcers are primarily a clinical issue and should be referred to an appropriate health professional in the first instance. However, where there are obvious signs of neglect should be referred to safeguarding.

Many people who are frail and have restricted mobility are at risk of developing ulcers on the points of their body which receive the most pressure. These are known as pressure ulcers and are sometimes called bed ulcers or ulcers. Pressure ulcers start with skin discolouration but, if left untreated, they can become very deep and infected; in the worst cases they can be life threatening. With management and care, pressure ulcers can be avoided in most cases (some estimates suggest as high as 95%).

Whilst not all pressure ulcers are due to neglect (whether deliberate or unintentional) each individual case should be considered, taking into account the person's medical condition, prognosis, any skin conditions and other signs of neglect, such as poor personal hygiene and living environment, poor nutrition and hydration and their own views on their care and treatment.

Staff should also refer to:

1. Their own organisation's policies and procedures on pressure ulcers, and
2. Other relevant local and national guidelines, protocols and policies e.g. NICE Guidance, incident reporting policies.

For further details please refer to the Threshold of Needs matrix overleaf.

Reporting: It is expected to be reported within one working day of establishing it is a safeguarding issue.

The person has mental capacity and has refused treatment and prevention strategies.

Only exceptional cases of self-neglect will trigger adult safeguarding. All standard interventions must be used first to manage risk, e.g. Care Management/Care Plan Approach/Multi-Disciplinary Team, providing:

1. A clear capacity assessment is in place.
2. Evidence available to show concerns were raised and support was sought from a relevant professional.
3. There has been full discussion with the patient, their family or representative.
